

PLAB Test

Before any doctor can practise medicine in the United Kingdom they must register with the General Medical Council (GMC). Doctors who qualify overseas must first pass an assessment test. This test is set by the Professional and Linguistic Assessment Board (PLAB) and is designed to assess medical expertise and knowledge of English. The PLAB test has two parts – part one can be taken in the UK or abroad, but part two can only be taken in the UK. After passing a PLAB test, limited registration with the GMC is given.
